

Contract for Participation

Project Next Generation is an exciting program, sponsored by Jesse White, Secretary of State and State Librarian, to give students the opportunity to try new computer technologies, explore life skills, and have fun at the library.

Signing this contract means you are agreeing to be an active participant in Project Next Generation at your library.

The library will:

- Offer programs number of times each week on days at time.
- The programs will be held at the public library in the room.
- The programs will start the week of date and be held every days of week until date.
- The library will underwrite the costs with a grant from Jesse White and the Illinois State Library so there is no cost to the students.
- Sessions will feature a mix of activities, food, and guest speakers allowing the students to socially interact with each other and the mentors while developing skills they can use for the rest of their lives.

The student will:

- Attend sessions.
- Be an active participant.
- Have fun.
- Leave inappropriate behaviors outside the library.
- Contribute ideas and creatively express themselves using technology.
- Practice social interaction in a safe environment.
- Provide feedback about what session activities they enjoy or wish were different.

The parents will:

- Encourage students to attend and participate.
- Attend sessions when invited.
